

One of the most popular images we see here at Stampington & Company is a flying bird. The ubiquity of birds is not incidental — since the dawn of the human species there has been a relationship between us and our feathered friends. We study and admire birds, enjoy their song, and perhaps we even envy their freedom of flight. They have come to represent many things in our culture, with influences in everything from religion to poetry and art. For this issue's Tempting Template Challenge, we pay homage to the breathtaking image of a bird in flight, and we invite you to show us what this timeless image means to you. Anything goes for this challenge, so long as you use rubber stamping in your cards and projects. Please send us your samples by August 15, 2013 for possible inclusion in our January/February/March 2014 issue.

Tempting Template

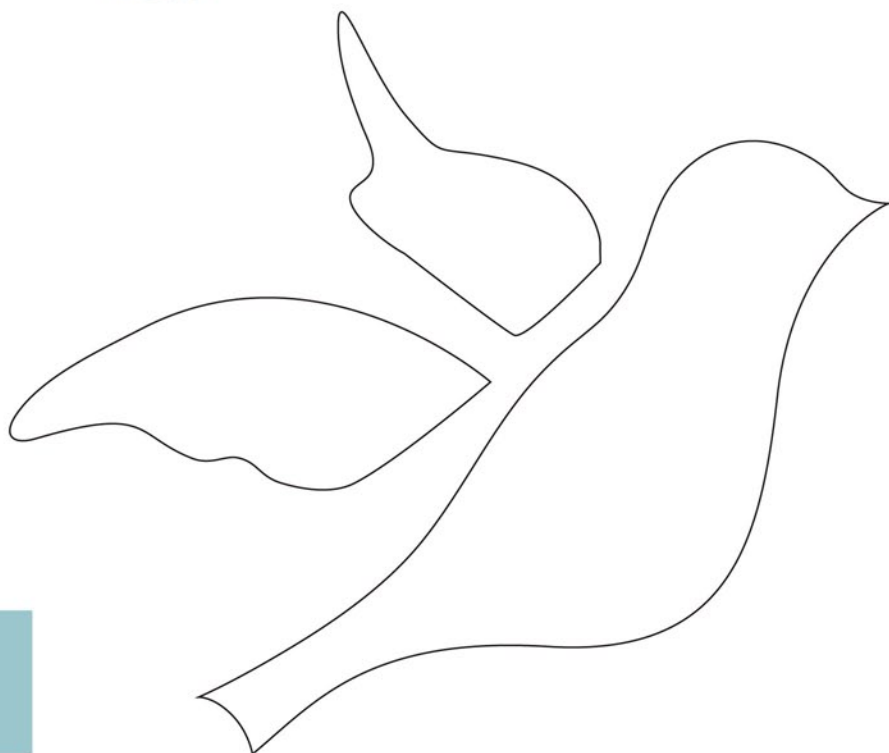

Airmail • 7" x 4½"
Andrea Rangno • Mission Viejo, CA

Absolute Deadline — August 15, 2013

Template Instructions

1. Photocopy template.
2. Cut bird and wings.
3. Stamp, decorate, and embellish pieces as desired.

You can find past templates and finished samples online at www.stampington.com/temptingtemplates/